

Where to Buy Quality Essential Oils

Reputable, non-MLM suppliers with transparent quality information

Click an underlined website to visit the company online.

1	Plant Therapy planttherapy.com Affordable and beginner-friendly. Publishes independent, batch-specific GC/MS reports for its essential oils.
2	Aromatics International aromatics.com A professional aromatherapy supplier that tests every batch and provides detailed chemistry and safety information.
3	Eden Botanicals edenbotanicals.com Offers an extensive selection of professional-quality essential oils. Each lot is independently GC/MS tested, with reports available online.
4	Nature's Gift naturesgift.com A small, aromatherapist-focused company offering batch testing, botanical information and thoughtful sourcing details.
5	Rocky Mountain Oils rockymountainoils.com Consumer-friendly and reasonably priced. Customers can use the number on a bottle to locate its batch-specific GC/MS report.
6	Simply Earth simplyearth.com An approachable choice for beginners, offering third-party GC/MS-tested oils along with DIY supplies and recipes.
7	Aura Cacia auracacia.com Widely available in natural-food stores and online. Provides clear botanical labeling and extensive purity testing.

What to look for when choosing an essential oil

Botanical name • Plant part • Extraction method • Country of origin • Batch or lot number • Batch-specific GC/MS report • Relevant safety precautions

Remember: Terms such as "therapeutic grade," "clinical grade" and "certified pure" are company marketing terms, not independent universal grades.